

MASLOW'S PSYCHOLOGICAL SYSTEM:

Its Importance for Political Theory in the 21st Century

Graduate School of System Design and Management and Graduate School of Human Relations

October 16 (Fri.), 2020, 9-11 am via ZOOM

Maslow argued that as humans and societies develop, their psychological needs and motivations become more elevated. Under the COVID-19 disaster, our needs and motivations may change, influencing societies and politics around the world. Maslow's biographer, a leading scholar-researcher in humanistic psychology, will offer his viewpoint.

Lecturer: Edward Hoffman, Ph.D.

Adjunct Clinical Associate Professor of Psychology
Yeshiva University, New York
B.A. Cornell University, Ph.D. University of Michigan-Ann Arbor

Moderator:

Dr. Plamen Akaliyski and Dr. Naoko Taniguchi
Graduate School of System Design and Management

Information:

Please register through the Graduate School of System Design and Management's HP (<http://www.sdm.keio.ac.jp/2020/09/18-164103.html>).
The URL and passcode for ZOOM will be sent to those who register.

